

Cocorovirus

Dinner time!

When it's time for dinner, I lay the table while Mummy and Daddy cook.

Of course, I always help with the dessert...

But, a lot of the time, Mummy and Daddy talk about how all the shelves were empty at the shops that morning.

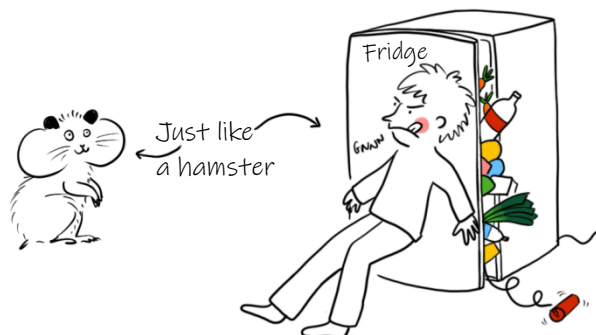

Now that worries me.

Let me explain it to you:

If some days in the shops there isn't much of this, or not enough of that, it's because during the Coco-lockdown people are buying more food and essentials to keep at home, so they don't have to go out shopping as much.

But, sometimes, people buy a bit more than they really need...

Look, Mummy! He's playing toilet roll jenga!

Translation : Luke Collins.

And that's why some shelves at the shops are completely empty. But, fortunately, every day new products are delivered to the shops...

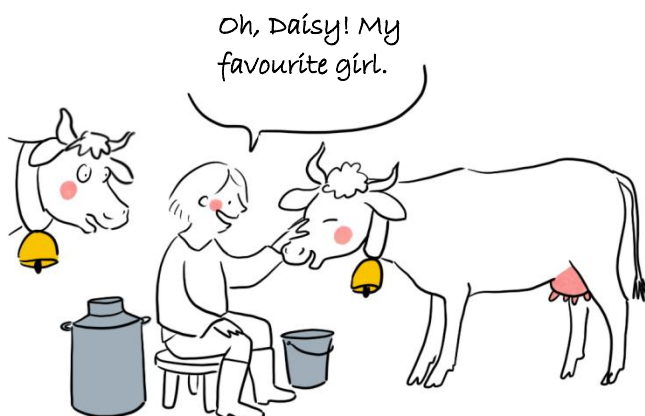

... which are made every day in lots of factories...

... grown...

... and produced by farmers...

... caught by fishermen...

... and baked by bakers...

All these people keep working to provide food for us all. They are the superheroes helping us defeat Coco!

So remember, thanks to them, you will always have something to eat!

Today, draw in your Coco-lockdown book your favourite dessert. You could even send me the recipe!

Translation : Luke Collins.